DESIGNER

Naama Hofman

Naama Hofman is an Israeli-born designer based in Berlin, whose practice explores the relationship between light, materiality, and atmosphere. Working at the intersection of collectible design and sculptural lighting, her work is defined by a refined minimalist language balancing structure, softness, and emotional presence. Treating light as both a functional and sculptural medium, Hofman creates objects that diffuse a quiet and intimate atmosphere within a space. Through materials such as glass, brass, stainless steel, and acrylic, she develops compositions that emphasize proportion, texture, and spatial sensitivity, all meticulously produced in her Berlin studio. Alongside her collectible works, Hofman collaborates with architects and interior designers on bespoke commissions and large-scale installations internationally. Her practice reflects a contemporary sensibility rooted in restraint, timelessness, and the subtle emotional impact of light within architectural environments.
