DESIGNER

Giotto Pagani

Giotto Pagani is an Italian architect and designer based between Milan and Lisbon. Educated at the Politecnico di Milano, his practice is grounded in a research-oriented architectural approach, where construction, proportion, and spatial logic inform every scale of intervention. Drawing from experiences across Italy and Portugal, Pagani developed a disciplined design language centered on reduction, structural clarity, and the relationship between idea and built form. Working between architecture and collectible design, his work explores the concept of microarchitecture through objects conceived as condensed spatial structures rather than purely functional artefacts. Through archetypal forms, material tension, and spatial composition, Pagani creates pieces that evoke fragments of architecture translated into domestic scale.
