DESIGNER

Kaspar Hamacher

Kaspar Hamacher is a Belgian designer and craftsman whose practice explores the sculptural potential of wood through collectible furniture and objects. Working with massive sections of timber, he embraces traditional handcraft techniques such as carving, splitting, and controlled charring to reveal the natural character of each tree. Rather than imposing form upon the material, Hamacher allows its grain, fissures, and organic contours to guide the creative process, resulting in powerful pieces distinguished by raw beauty and material honesty. Rooted in a deep respect for nature and craftsmanship, Hamacher's work blurs the boundary between sculpture and functional design. Through a restrained yet expressive approach, he transforms solid wood into timeless furniture that celebrates texture, permanence, and the enduring dialogue between maker and material, creating collectible pieces that embody both primal strength and quiet elegance.
