Lisa Allegra

Lisa Allegra is a French designer whose work unfolds at the intersection of sculpture, design, and craftsmanship. A graduate of the École des Arts Décoratifs in France, she established her Barcelona-based studio in 2021 to develop collections of lighting and furniture rooted primarily in ceramics. Clay is central to her practice—valued for its tactile immediacy and its capacity to shift between the infinitely small and the monumental. Drawing is often her point of departure, but it is through material exploration that her forms fully emerge. Her creations are conceived as families of objects: domes poised delicately on slender supports, cushions suspended in air, or pillars rising from the ground. Each piece plays with balance, weight, and presence, evoking both strength and fragility. Her aesthetic is guided by a search for essential forms—minimal yet warm—where emptiness and counter-form carry as much significance as mass. By integrating weaving, upholstery, and carpentry, she creates enduring, handmade objects that embody both conceptual clarity and a deep respect for craft.
