Karin Amdal

Karin Amdal is a Norwegian-born designer and ceramicist whose trajectory from art direction to studio ceramics informs a practice that marries graphic sensibility with tactile investigation. Holding a Master's in Design and a diploma in ceramic art, Amdal's handbuilt vessels explore texture, form, and the sediment of place—often incorporating local sands to mediate surface tone. Her ceramics are pared and elemental: simple volumes rendered with a rigorous attention to edge and finish, each object bearing the imprint of an art director's eye for composition and a maker's respect for material. Her work circulates through Nordic design outlets and craft platforms. Seen as a whole, Amdal's oeuvre proposes a quiet anthropology of the vessel—objects that register place, process, and an economy of means.
