DESIGNER

Niclas Wolf

Niclas Wolf is a German designer and artist whose practice explores the relationship between geology, material experimentation, and contemporary collectible design. Drawing inspiration from tectonic formations, mineral structures, and the transformative processes of the natural world, he creates sculptural furniture and objects that investigate the expressive potential of raw materials. Through an experimental approach, Wolf develops works that reveal the hidden forces, textures, and rhythms embedded within the earth's landscapes. Working primarily with ceramic, bronze, and cast materials, Wolf combines traditional craftsmanship with innovative production techniques to create pieces distinguished by their layered surfaces, monolithic forms, and tactile materiality. Balancing primitive references with a contemporary sculptural language, his practice blurs the boundaries between design, sculpture, and architecture, resulting in timeless works that evoke both geological permanence and quiet monumentality.
