Pierre De Valck

Pierre De Valck is a Belgian collectible designer whose work explores the intersection of craftsmanship, geology, and cultural memory. Based in Ghent, his practice is rooted in a lifelong fascination with archaeology, historical artefacts, and the narratives embedded within natural materials. Drawing inspiration from Belgium’s rich tradition of craftsmanship, De Valck creates handcrafted furniture that combines sculptural forms with rare minerals and ancient stones, transforming functional objects into contemporary heirlooms. Defined by an honest approach to materiality and meticulous attention to detail, each piece celebrates the intrinsic beauty and history of its components. Untreated stones, fossilised wood, and precious minerals are carefully integrated into cast or handcrafted elements, allowing geological time and human craftsmanship to coexist within a single object. Balancing timeless aesthetics with a deep respect for heritage, Pierre De Valck’s work transcends functionality to create collectible pieces that evoke permanence, memory, and the enduring dialogue between nature and design.
