MONITILLO

Monitillo 1980 is an Italian company rooted in the craftsmanship and expressive potential of natural stone. Combining generations of material expertise with a contemporary approach to design, the company works with architects and designers to explore new interpretations of marble and stone across furniture, objects, and collectible design. Its practice brings together traditional craftsmanship, technological precision, and a deep sensitivity to the unique character of each material. Through collaborations with designers such as French architect and designer Félix Millory, Monitillo 1980 transforms natural stone into sculptural pieces defined by proportion, materiality, and architectural presence. Travertine, marble, alabaster, and other carefully selected stones become an integral part of each design, with their natural colour, veining, and texture celebrated rather than concealed. The result is a collection of contemporary pieces that brings together refined design and the enduring character of Italian stone craftsmanship.
