Karen Chekerdjian

Karen Chekerdjian is a Lebanese-Armenian designer whose multidisciplinary practice spans collectible furniture, objects, and interior design. After studying at the Domus Academy in Milan under Massimo Morozzi, she returned to Beirut to establish her eponymous studio in 2001, developing a distinctive design language rooted in cultural dialogue, craftsmanship, and material experimentation. Working closely with Lebanese artisans, Chekerdjian reinterprets traditional making techniques through contemporary forms, creating sculptural pieces that balance function with artistic expression. Guided by her philosophy of transformation and adaptability, Chekerdjian's work explores the evolving relationship between object, material, and user. Combining bold geometries, refined detailing, and a rich material palette, her collectible furniture celebrates the meeting of heritage and innovation. Exhibited internationally and recognized as a leading voice in contemporary Middle Eastern design, her work embodies a timeless dialogue between local craftsmanship and global design culture.
