DESIGNER

Dongwook Choi

Operating from Gyeonggi do near Seoul, South Korean designer Dongwook Choi reimagines function through a lens of playful distortion and digitally born materiality. A metal craft graduate of Konkuk University, Choi manipulates form through computational design, transforming wave patterns, organic growth, or uncanny biomorphs into sculptural furnishings like the Crest and Trough and Tooth series. His work balances the uncanny and the tactile, producing pieces meant to evoke curiosity, even joy, in their owners and viewers. Rooted in experimentation, Choi's process begins in code and visualization, then materializes through hands-on fabrication. The results feel both digital and deeply human, each object an invitation to rethink the everyday, to feel the pulse of creative transformation in an object's curve or warped surface. His shows, from Seoul to the CICA Museum and Tokyo, underscore a practice actively translating digital dreams into palpable, performative design.
