MUT Design

MUT Design Studio was founded in 2010 by designer Alberto Sánchez and Eduardo Villalón and operates as a multidisciplinary practice driven by experimentation, intuition, and emotional design. Drawing inspiration from nature and the seemingly ordinary objects that shape everyday life, the studio reinterprets the familiar through a playful yet rigorous design process. At the core of MUT's philosophy lies a desire to transform prosaic elements into expressive objects, redefining their meaning and function while preserving an emotional connection with the user. This approach—marked by curiosity, independence, and a strong conceptual identity—has become one of the defining traits, positioning MUT as a distinctive voice within contemporary design. Their work has received widespread international recognition, earning numerous awards and being regularly featured in leading design and lifestyle publications worldwide. Today, MUT is regarded among the most influential designers of its generation. In 2020, the studio was invited as Guest of Honour at the international fair in Cologne, where they were commissioned to create Das Haus, one of the fair's most prestigious and emblematic projects.
