DESIGNER

Andres Monnier

Mexican artist and self-taught sculptor Andrés Monnier shapes rock, metal, glass, and concrete into sculptural furniture and objects that feel unearthed rather than made. Born in Guadalajara and based in Ensenada, he frames his practice as storytelling through matter, seeking a “materialized” consciousness in each piece. Monnier’s studio treats transformation—sometimes by fire—as both process and subject, producing limited works whose raw geometries carry mythic overtones. Recent presentations and collaborations in Latin America and Europe situate his work at the intersection of collectible design and art. His trajectory—moving from broader design ventures to a focused sculptural practice since 2021—underscores a discipline forged outside formal training and grounded in close dialogue with materials and master craftsmen.
