DESIGNER

Arturo Erbsman

Arturo Erbsman is a French designer and artist whose multidisciplinary practice explores the intersection of nature, technology, and material experimentation. After graduating from the École Nationale Supérieure des Arts Décoratifs in Paris, he established his studio in 2012, developing a body of work that spans lighting, collectible design, urban furniture, and immersive installations. His creations are distinguished by their poetic engagement with natural phenomena, particularly water, light, ice, and atmospheric transformation, translating ephemeral processes into tangible objects and experiences. Working between art and design, Erbsman investigates the dialogue between the manmade and the elemental, creating pieces that reveal the beauty and unpredictability of the natural world. His work has been exhibited internationally and featured in publications including Vogue, Architectural Digest, Interni, and The Financial Times. Through his Paris-based studio, he continues to develop collectible works and bespoke commissions that merge research, craftsmanship, and sensory experience.
