Comité de Proyectos

Comité de Proyectos is a Mexico City–based design studio founded by Andrea Flores and Lucía Soto. Working across furniture, objects, interiors, and spatial interventions, the studio develops projects that investigate the relationship between material, context, and everyday experience. Their practice is characterized by a thoughtful approach to form and construction, drawing inspiration from architecture, local craftsmanship, and the cultural landscapes of Mexico. Through close collaborations with artisans and manufacturers, Comité de Proyectos creates works that balance functionality with a strong sculptural sensibility. Exploring materials such as wood, metal, stone, and ceramics, the studio reinterprets traditional techniques through a contemporary lens, producing pieces that are both understated and expressive. Their work reflects an ongoing interest in creating meaningful connections between objects, spaces, and the people who inhabit them.
