Mademoiselle Jo

Mademoiselle Jo is a Belgian design studio founded by Joan Bebronne, whose creative path began at La Cambre as a stylist before spending over two decades shaping trends, colors, and materials in the world of lingerie. Guided by a lifelong fascination with architecture, she eventually turned her focus toward object and furniture design, where structure, form, and material become her language of expression. The studio is defined by its innovative spirit and meticulous attention to detail. Each creation is conceived as a dialogue between concept and material, balancing precision with poetry. Craftsmanship plays a central role, with every piece brought to life through collaborations with highly skilled European artisans who share the studio's dedication to excellence. Working across furniture, lighting, and sculptural objects, Mademoiselle Jo blends elegance and functionality, offering designs that are both contemporary and timeless. The result is a body of work that celebrates refined forms, tactile beauty, and the enduring value of artisanal savoir-faire.
