Sebastián Ángeles

Sebastian Ángeles is a Mexican industrial designer and Creative Director of Dórica, one of Mexico's leading contemporary furniture brands. His practice is distinguished by conceptual rigor and a refined design language that seamlessly weaves craftsmanship, cultural heritage, and modernist aesthetics. Positioned at the forefront of a new generation of Latin American collectible design, Ángeles' work reflects a deep sensitivity to material, proportion, and cultural narrative. Throughout his career, Ángeles has collaborated with respected brands and institutions, earning international recognition for his thoughtful and enduring approach. His Frequency collection received media, including ArchDaily. In 2024, Ángeles was awarded the Paris Design Award in the Furniture & Lighting category and presented a sculptural work at the Museo Nacional de Antropología in Mexico City. Created in collaboration with a master artisan during a design residency, the piece underscored his commitment to the dialogue between art, tradition, and contemporary practice. In 2025, he exhibits at Salone Satellite in Milan, marking a significant milestone in his international presence. Across museums, fairs, and design platforms worldwide, Ángeles' work remains rooted in timelessness and cultural resonance, transcending trends through clarity
