Part Studio Atelier

studio PART is a conceptual design studio and manufacturing atelier where each object, drawing, and concept is considered as part of a greater whole. Guided by the philosophy that nothing exists in isolation, the studio explores how every element—form, material, or spatial intervention—interacts with its surroundings, shaping experiences that are interconnected, playful, and meaningful. The PART manifesto embodies this ethos: respect the sculptural value of objects, embrace material as colour, dive into experimentation, observe and be inspired, craft consciously, structure chaos, and above all, remain open to wondrous interactions. Every Julie Van Mulders, an experienced interior and furniture architect with a keen eye for lighting and landscape architecture, brings spatial elegance and “sun-sided” lightness to the studio’s work. Lennart Van Uffelen, celebrated for his Functionality Kills the Fun collection, contributes a passion for exceptional design and materials, remaining intimately involved in every stage of production to ensure aesthetic and constructive excellence. Together, PART creates objects and spaces that are simultaneously conceptual, functional, and poetic—inviting engagement, interaction, and a heightened awareness of the world as an interconnected whole.
