DESIGNER

Wonwoo Koo

Wonwoo Koo is a Korean designer whose practice approaches furniture and object design as a form of sculptural inquiry. Working at the intersection of experimentation and craftsmanship, he explores new material technologies alongside traditional making techniques, allowing process to play an active role in shaping form. Central to Koo's work is a nuanced tension between rigid structure and fluid expression. His objects oscillate between the engineered and the organic, revealing a careful balance of control and intuition. Structural clarity is softened through subtle curves, refined surfaces, and an acute sensitivity to proportion. Whether developed as prototypes or produced in limited editions, Koo's designs are characterized by meticulous attention to detail and finish. Materials are handled with precision, yet always in service of a broader conceptual investigation into form, function, and perception. By maintaining full functional integrity while engaging with sculptural language, Koo challenges conventional distinctions between art and design. His work invites viewers to reconsider furniture not merely as utilitarian objects, but as thoughtful spatial presences—objects that operate equally through use, material presence, and visual contemplation.
