DESIGNER

Henry Wilson

Sydney-based industrial designer Henry Wilson advances a language of elemental forms and enduring materials, privileging permanence over spectacle. Educated in Canberra, at RISD, and at Design Academy Eindhoven, he returned to Australia to found his studio in 2012. Wilson's objects—hardware, furniture, and lighting—embrace the traces of casting and handwork, revealing process as an aesthetic in itself. The work is direct, functional, and quietly humane, resisting disposable culture in favor of pieces that patinate with time. Seen in design galleries and progressive interiors, his practice extends a modern craft lineage while engaging contemporary manufacturing realities in Australia and abroad.
