Amande Haeghen

Amande Haeghen stands at the crossroads of artistry and material investigation. Paris-born and now based in Lisbon, Haeghen crafts lighting, sculptures, and wall installations from stoneware, porcelain, glass, and French marble, each piece hand-shaped and uniquely numbered. Her inspiration springs from the natural world, her family's creative legacy, and the beauty of transformation. In her Lisbon studio, Haeghen cultivates not only ceramics but also a vibrant community of artists, promoting knowledge sharing and open experimentation. Her works evoke the serenity and unpredictability of nature, each form carrying the subtle imprint of the maker's hand and an enduring ecological ethos. Through a practice rooted in intuition, craftsmanship, and material sensitivity, she creates collectible pieces that blur the boundaries between design, sculpture, and functional art, offering a poetic reflection on the relationship between people, objects, and the natural world.
