Lucile Gracile

Lucile Gracile (b. 1988) is a Paris-based ceramic artist whose practice reinterprets traditional plate-modeling techniques through a sculptural and poetic lens. Drawing on primitive and universal forms, she creates objects charged with dreamlike symbolism, where the ancestral and the intimate converge. Her work reflects on society's tendency to confine imagination to childhood, privileging efficiency and productivity over dreams and utopian thought. Gracile reclaims these territories, allowing the inner child and speculative imagination to emerge as active forces within her practice.

Inspired by ancient mythologies and humanity's enduring fascination with the afterlife, her visual language incorporates celestial motifs, esoteric rituals, and sacred sites. Each work becomes an open narrative, inviting viewers to project their own associations and reconnect with forgotten imaginative landscapes. Balancing intuition and craftsmanship, Gracile's sculptures inhabit the threshold between ritual artifact and contemporary object, offering poetic reflections on memory, belief, transcendence, and imagination.
