Lucile Gracile

Lucile Gracile (b. 1988) is a Paris-based ceramic artist whose practice draws upon traditional plate-modeling techniques to create sculptural objects imbued with dreamlike symbolism. Her work is rooted in the combination of primitive and universal forms, resulting in designs that feel at once ancestral and deeply personal. Gracile's artistic vision responds to what she perceives as a societal tendency to confine imagination and creative freedom to childhood, relegating dreams and utopias to the margins in favor of efficiency and productivity. Through her objects, she consciously reclaims these neglected territories, allowing her inner child and speculative visions to open narrative, inviting viewers to project their own meanings and reconnect with the imaginative landscapes of their past. Her visual language is nourished by ancient mythologies and humanity's timeless fascination with the afterlife. Symbolism drawn from stars, esoteric rituals, and spiritual sites informs her forms, endowing them with a quiet sense of mystery and transcendence. Balancing intuition and craft, Lucile Gracile's work occupies a space between ritual object and contemporary sculpture—offering poetic reflections on memory, belief, and the enduring power of imagination.
